

The All-American Slurp

Lensey
Namioka

BACKGROUND This story deals with a Chinese family's unfamiliarity with American etiquette. Etiquette is a system of rules and traditions that guide behavior in social situations. Different cultures often have different rules. In China, suffering public humiliation—"losing face"—is considered one of the worst things that can happen to a person. Public displays of emotion are frowned upon. It is also considered impolite to brag about one's accomplishments.

The first time our family was invited out to dinner in America, we disgraced ourselves while eating celery. We had emigrated to this country from China, and during our early days here we had a hard time with American table manners.

In China we never ate celery raw, or any other kind of vegetable raw. We always had to disinfect the vegetables in boiling water first. When we were presented with our first relish tray, the raw celery caught us unprepared.

We had been invited to dinner by our neighbors, the Gleasons. After arriving at the house, we shook hands with our hosts and packed ourselves into a sofa. As our family of four sat stiffly in a row, my younger brother and I stole glances at our parents for a clue as to what to do next.

Mrs. Gleason offered the relish tray to Mother. The tray looked pretty, with its tiny red radishes, curly sticks of carrots, and long, slender stalks of pale green celery. "Do try some of

MARK IT UP

Use these marks to monitor your reading:

* This is important.

? I don't understand.

! This is a surprise.

When you see this pencil , you'll be asked to mark up the text. You can also write in this book in any way you find useful.

FOCUS

The author establishes the tone of this story early on. As you read, notice how cultural differences can lead to humorous misunderstandings.

slurp! Z-Z-zip!
shloop! crunch!

revolting (rĭ-vōl'tĭng) adj.
causing disgust revolt v.

USE PRIOR KNOWLEDGE

Do you think the Gleasons thought that the Lins were being rude when they refused to try the sour cream dip?

yes no

According to American etiquette, what would have been a more polite way for the Lins to turn down the offer?

CLARIFY

Underline two cultural differences that led to the Lin family's confusion over the celery.

the celery, Mrs. Lin," she said. "It's from a local farmer, and it's sweet."

Mother picked up one of the green stalks, and Father followed suit. Then I picked up a stalk, and my brother did too. So there we sat, each with a stalk of celery in our right hand.

Mrs. Gleason kept smiling. "Would you like to try some of the dip, Mrs. Lin? It's my own recipe: sour cream and onion flakes, with a dash of Tabasco sauce."

Most Chinese don't care for dairy products, and in those days I wasn't even ready to drink fresh milk. Sour cream sounded perfectly revolting. Our family shook our heads in unison. ◀

Mrs. Gleason went off with the relish tray to the other guests, and we carefully watched to see what they did. Everyone seemed to eat the raw vegetables quite happily.

Mother took a bite of her celery. Crunch. "It's not bad!" she whispered.

Father took a bite of his celery. Crunch. "Yes, it is good," he said, looking surprised.

I took a bite, and then my brother. Crunch, crunch. It was more than good; it was delicious. Raw celery has a slight sparkle, a zingy taste that you don't get in cooked celery. When Mrs. Gleason came around with the relish tray, we each took another stalk of celery, except my brother. He took two.

There was only one problem: long strings ran through the length of the stalk, and they got caught in my teeth. When I help my mother in the kitchen, I always pull the strings out before slicing celery.

I pulled the strings out of my stalk. Z-z-zip, z-z-zip. My brother followed suit. Z-z-zip, z-z-zip, z-z-zip. To my left, my parents were taking care of their own stalks. Z-z-zip, z-z-zip, z-z-zip. ◀

Suddenly I realized that there was dead silence except for our zipping. Looking up, I saw that the eyes of everyone in the room were on our family. Mr. and Mrs. Gleason, their daughter Meg, who was my friend, and their neighbors the Badels—they were all staring at us as we busily pulled the strings of our celery.

That wasn't the end of it. Mrs. Gleason announced that dinner was served and invited us to the dining table. It was lavishly covered with platters of food, but we couldn't see any chairs around the table. So we helpfully carried over some dining chairs and sat down. All the other guests just stood there.

Mrs. Gleason bent down and whispered to us, "This is a buffet dinner. You help yourselves to some food and eat it in the living room."

Our family beat a retreat back to the sofa as if chased by enemy soldiers. For the rest of the evening, too mortified to go back to the dining table, I nursed a bit of potato salad on my plate. ►

Next day Meg and I got on the school bus together. I wasn't sure how she would feel about me after the spectacle¹ our family made at the party. But she was just the same as usual, and the only reference she made to the party was, "Hope you and your folks got enough to eat last night. You certainly didn't take very much. Mom never tries to figure out how much food to prepare. She just puts everything on the table and hopes for the best."

I began to relax. The Gleasons' dinner party wasn't so different from a Chinese meal after all. My mother also puts everything on the table and hopes for the best.

PAUSE & REFLECT

Meg was the first friend I had made after we came to America. I eventually got acquainted with a few other kids in school, but Meg was still the only real friend I had.

My brother didn't have any problems making friends. He spent all his time with some boys who were teaching him lavishly (lăv'ĭsh-lē) adv.

in a rich or plentiful way;
abundantly

mortified (môr'tē-fīd') adj.
ashamed, humiliated mortify v.

MAKE INFERENCES

How would you describe the mood as the Lin family sits in the Gleason's living room? Circle any answers that apply to this part of the story.

- | | |
|--------------------|-----------------|
| nervous | relieved |
| giddy | worried |
| embarrassed | angry |

PAUSE & REFLECT

1. What happened at the Gleasons' dinner party to make the narrator feel as if her family members had disgraced themselves? CLARIFY

2. What does the author's attitude, or tone, seem to be toward the immigrant experience? MAKE INFERENCES

FOCUS
Read on to find out how the Lin family tries to fit into American culture.

1. spectacle: public display of bad behavior.

baseball, and in no time he could speak English much faster than I could—not better, but faster.

I worried more about making mistakes, and I spoke carefully, making sure I could say everything right before opening my mouth. At least I had a better accent than my 90 parents, who never really got rid of their Chinese accent, even years later. My parents had both studied English in school before coming to America, but what they had studied was mostly written English, not spoken.

Father's approach to English was a scientific one. Since Chinese verbs have no tense, he was fascinated by the way English verbs changed form according to whether they were in the present, past imperfect, perfect, pluperfect, future, or future perfect tense. He was always making diagrams of verbs and their inflections,² and he looked for opportunities
100 to show off his mastery of the pluperfect and future perfect tenses, his two favorites. "I shall have finished my project by Monday," he would say smugly.³

Mother's approach was to memorize lists of polite phrases that would cover all possible social situations. She was constantly muttering things like "I'm fine, thank you. And you?" Once she accidentally stepped on someone's foot, and hurriedly blurted, "Oh, that's quite all right!" Embarrassed by her slip, she resolved to do better next time. So when someone stepped on her foot, she cried, "You're welcome!" ◀

110 In our own different ways, we made progress in learning English. But I had another worry, and that was my appearance. My brother didn't have to worry, since Mother bought him blue jeans for school, and he dressed like all the other boys. But she insisted that girls had to wear skirts. By the time she saw that Meg and the other girls were wearing jeans, it was too late. My school clothes were bought already, and we didn't have money left to buy new outfits for me. We had too many other things to buy first, like furniture, pots, and pans. ◀

QUESTION

Reread the boxed text. How does Mrs. Lin's use of "polite phrases" add to the story's humorous mood?

CONNECT

Imagine that you were living in a new country and trying to learn the language. Which character do you think you would most behave like—the narrator, her brother, her father, or her mother? Why?

2. inflections (in-flĕk'shənz): different tenses.

3. smugly: with self-satisfaction; self-righteously.

120 The first time I visited Meg's house, she took me upstairs to her room, and I wound up trying on her clothes. We were pretty much the same size, since Meg was shorter and thinner than average. Maybe that's how we became friends in the first place. Wearing Meg's jeans and T-shirt, I looked at myself in the mirror. I could almost pass for an American—from the back, anyway. At least the kids in school wouldn't stop and stare at me in the hallways, which was what they did when they saw me in my white blouse and navy blue skirt that went a couple of inches below the knees. ▶

130 When Meg came to my house, I invited her to try on my Chinese dresses, the ones with a high collar and slits up the sides. Meg's eyes were bright as she looked at herself in the mirror. She struck several sultry poses, and we nearly fell over laughing.

The dinner party at the Gleasons' didn't stop my growing friendship with Meg. Things were getting better for me in other ways too. Mother finally bought me some jeans at the end of the month, when Father got his paycheck. She wasn't in any hurry about buying them at first, until I worked on her. This is what I did. Since we didn't have a car in those days, I often ran down to the neighborhood store to pick up things for her. The groceries cost less at a big supermarket, but the closest one was many blocks away. One day, when she ran out of flour, I offered to borrow a bike from our neighbor's son and buy a ten-pound bag of flour at the big supermarket. I mounted the boy's bike and waved to Mother. "I'll be back in five minutes!"

Before I started pedaling, I heard her voice behind me. "You can't go out in public like that! People can see all the way up to your thighs!"

150 "I'm sorry," I said innocently. "I thought you were in a hurry to get the flour." For dinner we were going to have pot-stickers (fried Chinese dumplings), and we needed a lot of flour. ▶

VISUALIZE

Underline the details that help you picture the narrator's school clothes.

Then write a sentence that describes how her clothes differ from those of her classmates.

USE PRIOR KNOWLEDGE

What does the narrator do that many kids might do when they want something that their parents do not want to buy?

stump! Z-Z-Zip! P! shloop! crunch!

PAUSE & REFLECT

1. Underline key events on this page that lead the narrator to say, "There was hope that the Lins might become a normal American family after all."
DRAW CONCLUSIONS

2. Do you think that the narrator is starting to feel more comfortable in the United States? Use details from the story to support your answer. EVALUATE

FOCUS
Despite the family's growing knowledge of American customs, embarrassing events still happen. Find out what happens when the Lins eat at a fancy French restaurant.

"Couldn't you borrow a girl's bicycle?" complained Mother
"That way your skirt won't be pushed up."

"There aren't too many of those around," I said. "Almost all the girls wear jeans while riding a bike, so they don't see any point buying a girl's bike."

We didn't eat pot-stickers that evening, and Mother was thoughtful. Next day we took the bus downtown and she 160 bought me a pair of jeans. In the same week, my brother made the baseball team of his junior high school, Father started taking driving lessons, and Mother discovered rummage sales. We soon got all the furniture we needed, plus a dart board and a 1,000-piece jigsaw puzzle (fourteen hours later, we discovered that it was a 999-piece jigsaw puzzle). There was hope that the Lins might become a normal American family after all. PAUSE & REFLECT

Then came our dinner at the Lakeview Restaurant.
The Lakeview was an expensive restaurant, one of those 170 places where a headwaiter dressed in tails conducted you to your seat, and the only light came from candles and flaming desserts. In one corner of the room a lady harpist played tinkling melodies.

Father wanted to celebrate, because he had just been promoted. He worked for an electronics company, and after his English started improving, his superiors decided to appoint him to a position more suited to his training. The promotion not only brought a higher salary but was also a tremendous boost to his pride.

180 Up to then we had eaten only in Chinese restaurants. Although my brother and I were becoming fond of hamburgers, my parents didn't care much for Western food, other than chow mein.⁴

4. chow mein (chou' mān'): Chinese-American dish of vegetables and meat served over fried noodles.

But this was a special occasion, and Father asked his coworkers to recommend a really elegant restaurant. So there we were at the Lakeview, stumbling after the headwaiter in the murky dining room.

At our table we were handed our menus, and they were so big that to read mine I almost had to stand up again. But why bother? It was mostly in French, anyway.

Father, being an engineer, was always systematic. He took out a pocket French dictionary. "They told me that most of the items would be in French, so I came prepared." He even had a pocket flashlight, the size of a marking pen. While Mother held the flashlight over the menu, he looked up the items that were in French. ▶

"Pâté en croûte," he muttered. "Let's see . . . pâté is paste . . . croûte is crust . . . hmm . . . a paste in crust."

The waiter stood looking patient. I squirmed and died at least fifty times. ▶

At long last Father gave up. "Why don't we just order four complete dinners at random?" he suggested.

"Isn't that risky?" asked Mother. "The French eat some rather peculiar things, I've heard."

"A Chinese can eat anything a Frenchman can eat," Father declared. ▶

The soup arrived in a plate. How do you get soup up from a plate? I glanced at the other diners, but the ones at the nearby tables were not on their soup course, while the more distant ones were invisible in the darkness.

Fortunately my parents had studied books on Western etiquette before they came to America. "Tilt your plate," whispered my mother. "It's easier to spoon the soup up that way."

She was right. Tilting the plate did the trick. But the etiquette book didn't say anything about what you did after the soup reached your lips. As any respectable Chinese knows, the correct way to eat your soup is to slurp. This helps to cool the liquid and prevent you from burning your lips. It also shows your appreciation.

MONITOR

Underline examples of word choice in lines 168–196 that contribute to this scene's humorous mood. (1)

MAKE INFERENCES

Why does the narrator say, "I squirmed and died at least fifty times"?

PREDICT

What do you think the Lin family members will do to embarrass themselves at the Lakeview Restaurant?

etiquette (ět'ÿ-kět') n. the practice of social manners consumption (kən-sūmp'shən)

n. the act of taking in, eating, or drinking consume v.

 TestSmart

Which words best describe the author's tone in the boxed text?

- (A) appreciative and loving
- (B) critical but affectionate
- (C) defiant and angry
- (D) mysterious and secretive

TIP A test question may ask you to identify the author's tone in a passage. To answer this kind of question, think about what the author says and how she says it. The author has the narrator compare her family's shlooping to water draining loudly from a beach. This shows that the narrator thinks her family stands out in a bad way. The sentence "That was the Lin family, eating soup" shows that the narrator finds her family's behavior embarrassing. It also suggests that this isn't the first time they have misbehaved in public. The author's use of humor keeps this section from being too harsh toward the Lins.

220 We showed our appreciation. Shloop, went my father. Shloop, went my mother. Shloop, shloop, went my brother, who was the hungriest.

The lady harpist stopped playing to take a rest. And in the silence, our family's consumption of soup suddenly seemed unnaturally loud. You know how it sounds on a rocky beach when the tide goes out and the water drains from all those little pools? They go shloop, shloop, shloop. That was the Lin family, eating soup.

230 At the next table a waiter was pouring wine. When a large shloop reached him, he froze. The bottle continued to pour, and red wine flooded the tabletop and into the lap of a customer. Even the customer didn't notice anything at first, being also hypnotized by the shloop, shloop, shloop. ◀

It was too much. "I need to go to the toilet," I mumbled, jumping to my feet. A waiter, sensing my urgency, quickly directed me to the ladies' room.

I splashed cold water on my burning face, and as I dried myself with a paper towel, I stared into the mirror. In this perfumed ladies' room, with its pink-and-silver wallpaper and marbled sinks, I looked completely out of place. What was I doing here? What was our family doing in the Lakeview Restaurant? In America?

The door to the ladies' room opened. A woman came in and glanced curiously at me. I retreated into one of the toilet cubicles and latched the door.

Time passed—maybe half an hour, maybe an hour. Then I heard the door open again, and my mother's voice. "Are you in there? You're not sick, are you?"

250 There was real concern in her voice. A girl can't leave her family just because they slurp their soup. Besides, the toilet cubicle had a few drawbacks as a permanent residence. "I'm all right," I said, undoing the latch.

Mother didn't tell me how the rest of the dinner went, and I didn't want to know. In the weeks following, I managed to push the whole thing into the back of my mind, where it

 PAUSE & REFLECT

1. Why does the slurping incident at the Lakeview restaurant affect the narrator so deeply? MAKE INFERENCES

2. Write an A next to details that show Mr. and Mrs. Lin are becoming Americanized. Write a C next to details that show they still follow Chinese customs.

 COMPARE & CONTRAST

 FOCUS

Read the rest of the story to find out what happens when the Lins decide to host a dinner party. Put a star by each American behavior that surprises them.

jumped out at me only a few times a day. Even now, I turn hot all over when I think of the Lakeview Restaurant.

260 But by the time we had been in this country for three months, our family was definitely making progress toward becoming Americanized. I remember my parents' first PTA⁵ meeting. Father wore a neat suit and tie, and Mother put on her first pair of high heels. She stumbled only once. They met my homeroom teacher and beamed as she told them that I would make honor roll soon at the rate I was going. Of course Chinese etiquette forced Father to say that I was a very stupid girl and Mother to protest that the teacher was showing favoritism toward me. But I could tell they were both very proud.  PAUSE & REFLECT

270 The day came when my parents announced that they wanted to give a dinner party. We had invited Chinese friends to eat with us before, but this dinner was going to be different. In addition to a Chinese-American family, we were going to invite the Gleasons.

"Gee, I can hardly wait to have dinner at your house," Meg said to me. "I just love Chinese food."

That was a relief. Mother was a good cook, but I wasn't sure if people who ate sour cream would also eat chicken gizzards⁶ stewed in soy sauce.

280 Mother decided not to take a chance with chicken gizzards. Since we had Western guests, she set the table with large dinner plates, which we never used in Chinese meals. In fact we didn't use individual plates at all, but picked up food from the platters in the middle of the table and brought it directly to our rice bowls. Following the practice of Chinese-American restaurants, Mother also placed large serving spoons on the platters.

5. PTA: Parent Teacher Association.

6. gizzards: A gizzard is the muscular pouch behind a bird's stomach that helps with its digestion.

 TestSmart

In lines 287–291, which sense does the author’s use of imagery appeal to most?

- (A) smell (C) touch
(B) sight (D) hearing

TIP A test question may ask you about imagery. To answer this kind of question about an author’s style, reread the passage you are being asked about. Look for words and phrases that appeal to a specific sense. In this case, find the following words and underline them: beautifully arranged, colorful, noodle-thin, and glistening pink.

Are these smells, sights, sounds, textures, or temperatures?

QUESTION

Reread the boxed text. What earlier scene in the story does this scene remind you of?

How are these two scenes alike? How are they different?

alike: _____

different: _____

cope (kōp) v. to struggle to overcome difficulties

The dinner started well. Mrs. Gleason exclaimed at the beautifully arranged dishes of food: the colorful candied fruit in the sweet-and-sour pork dish, the noodle-thin shreds of chicken meat stir-fried with tiny peas, and the glistening pink prawns⁷ in a ginger sauce. ◀

At first I was too busy enjoying my food to notice how the guests were doing. But soon I remembered my duties. Sometimes guests were too polite to help themselves and you had to serve them with more food.

I glanced at Meg, to see if she needed more food, and my eyes nearly popped out at the sight of her plate. It was piled with food: the sweet-and-sour meat pushed right against the chicken shreds, and the chicken sauce ran into the prawns. She had been taking food from a second dish before she finished eating her helping from the first!

Horrified, I turned to look at Mrs. Gleason. She was dumping rice out of her bowl and putting it on her dinner plate. Then she ladled prawns and gravy on top of the rice and mixed everything together, the way you mix sand, gravel, and cement to make concrete.

I couldn’t bear to look any longer, and I turned to Mr. Gleason. He was chasing a pea around his plate. Several times he got it to the edge, but when he tried to pick it up with his chopsticks, it rolled back toward the center of the plate again. Finally he put down his chopsticks and picked up the pea with his fingers. He really did! A grown man! ◀

All of us, our family and the Chinese guests, stopped eating to watch the activities of the Gleasons. I wanted to giggle. Then I caught my mother’s eyes on me. She frowned and shook her head slightly, and I understood the message: the Gleasons were not used to Chinese ways, and they were just coping the best they could. For some reason I thought of celery strings.

7. prawns (prōnz): large seafood, similar to shrimp.

320

When the main courses were finished, Mother brought out a platter of fruit. "I hope you weren't expecting a sweet dessert," she said. "Since the Chinese don't eat dessert, I didn't think to prepare any." ▶

"Oh, I couldn't possibly eat dessert!" cried Mrs. Gleason. "I'm simply stuffed!"

Meg had different ideas. When the table was cleared, she announced that she and I were going for a walk. "I don't know about you, but I feel like dessert," she told me, when we were outside. "Come on, there's a Dairy Queen down the street. I could use a big chocolate milkshake!"

330

Although I didn't really want anything more to eat, I insisted on paying for the milkshakes. After all, I was still hostess.

Meg got her large chocolate milkshake and I had a small one. Even so, she was finishing hers while I was only half done. Toward the end she pulled hard on her straws and went shloop, shloop.

"Do you always slurp when you eat a milkshake?" I asked, before I could stop myself.

Meg grinned. "Sure. All Americans slurp."

 PAUSE & REFLECT

 TestSmart

VOCABULARY

What does the word courses mean in line 320?

- A available options
- B the classes at a college
- C the routes of a race
- D the parts of a meal

TIP A test question may ask you to identify the meaning of a word that has more than one possible meaning. To answer a question about a multiple-meaning word, reread the sentence in which the word appears. Use context clues to figure out how the word is being used. Then look for the answer choice that matches this meaning.

 PAUSE & REFLECT

What does the narrator learn at the end of the story?

Big Question

What is this story's answer to the question of whether people are more alike or different? Explain.
